A diagram of a railway line. A thick black line represents the track, sloping upwards from left to right. Above the track, the text "WEST BOUND TRACK" is written in a bold, sans-serif font, oriented diagonally to follow the track's path. Below the track, there are two parallel lines forming a rectangular frame. Inside this frame, the number "50" is repeated three times: once on the left line and once on the right line, with a vertical line separating the two "50"s on each side.
